The Object.

This Institution aims to give a CHRISTIAN EDUCATION, to avoid a training that is exclusively secular, and make young women earnest, conscientious and high-minded; to implant correct moral principles, and give MENTAL POWER.

Display and affectation are avoided. It is not a fashionable or finishing school. Substantial, practical knowledge is the object. In short, students are expected to work, not to amuse themselves.

The Course of Study will indicate that a well-balanced, symmetrical education is intended; that various departments are to be kept within proper limits, no one being allowed to overshadow another.

The Institution is now exclusively for young ladies, no male students being received.

Situation.

Hollidaysburg, Pa., is near the foot of the Alleghany Mountains, in a region noted for a healthful atmosphere and the beauty and grandeur of its scenery. Many localities within sight from the seminary windows are familiar to artists, and have o'ten been reproduced in canvas. The scenery frequently attracts the pupils to exercise, and affords means for æsthetic culture as well as enjoyment.

The town is accessible by the Pennsylvania Central R. R. The situation and accommodations make this School one of the most charming summer resorts in the state, while its proximity to churches, its dry atmosphere and its cheerful rooms make it a delightful place for winter study.

The grounds embrace about four acres.

Advantages.

The school hall and recitation rooms are unusually large, cheerful and well-ventilated. They are furnished with Walnut Desks of an approved pattern, Slated Black Boards, Natural History Charts, Warren's Geographical Charts, Guyot's Maps, extensive Philosophical and Chemical Apparatus, &c., &c.

The students have access to works on History, Literature, Science, and to Books of reference. The Reading Table is furnished with the most prominent English and American Reviews and Magazines.

Any scholar may devote special attention to Music, Mathematics, Language or Literature.

The School is furnished with new pianos. The advantages in Music are hardly surpassed by those of any institution in the country.

Modern Languages are taught by the Rev Henry E. Lippert, a native of Germany, whose knowledge of French enabled him to preach for several years in that language. Classes in languages have, at least, three recitations each week.

The methods of general instruction are believed to be in accordance with the best conclusions of Mental Science, and the principles established by the ablest educators. The prominent principles and laws of each science are sought, explained and fixed on the minds of the students.

Accommodations.

The Building recently finished is one of the most commodious, elegant and complete in the country. It was planned by an eminent architect for the special purpose of a female seminary. The ground plan has the form of a cross. The front is 150 feet in length, and the extreme depth is 160 feet. The walls are built of stone, and are all furred to prevent dampness, a precaution hardly necessary in the situation. The roof is of slate, and combines three styles of architecture, presenting a varied and pleasing appearance.

The ROOMS are unusually large and cheerful. Those on the principal story are fourteen feet in height; of the second story, eleven; of the third, nine and a-half. Generally but two pupils will occupy one room.

Every window sash moves by means of cords and weights; each door has a transom, and each chimney two ventilating flues; the halls are wide and unobstructed, so that every room can be thoroughly ventilated. The entire house—rooms and halls—will hereafter be heated on Rutan's system, which is believed to be more philosophical and healthful than any other.

A very important matter to every student is to have wholesome water. In this respect, this school is abundantly provided. A mountain stream of very soft water, always clear and pure, is taken by pipes to all parts of the building. Special safeguards are prepared against fire. Each pupil is entitled to a hot or cold bath each week.

Each room is furnished with a wardrobe, bureau, wash-stand, carpet, gas, and everything necessary for home comfort. Each bed is furnished with two comfortables, a blanket, mattress and sheets. Pupils desiring more covering must furnish it at their own expense. Pupils furnish their own towels, and should bring overshoes and umbrellas.

Instruction.

In order to complete the course of study in four years, each student should have a thorough knowledge of Arithmetic through fractions, and of the elements of Geography and English Grammar, before entering the Institution.

READING, WRITING, COMPOSITION, PROSE and ENGLISH LITERATURE are pursued throughout the course. Pupils are required to write analyses and exercises in nearly all their studies.

Latin, German, French and Italian are optional studies. Harkness' Grammar is used in Latin; Otto's in German; and Fasquelle's in French. The majority of the pupils study some other language than English.

Thorough instruction and drill afforded in gymnastics.

Before graduation, every student must review, and be examined upon each study of the course, or upon studies fully equivalent in extent and importance.

The Tenth Session begins August 31st, 1870, and closes December 20th, 1870. The Eleventh Session begins January 4th, 1871, and closes March 29th, 1871. The Twelfth Session begins April 5th, 1871, and closes June 28th, 1871.

It would be preferable to divide the year into two equal sessions, but the Holidays always so interrupt this arrangement as to throw much confusion into the school. Students from a distance can remain in the seminary during the spring recess (subject to the usual regulations of the Institution,) without extra charge.

No deduction will be made for absence during the first or last two weeks of a session, nor for any, unnecessary absence during the session.

Religious Exercises.

The Bible is used as a text-book, and is daily read in the school. A general Bible class is held every Sabbath. The evidences and doctrines of Evangelical Christianity are taught.

On Sabbath morning, each pupil is required to attend such church as parents or guardians may prefer; but, in all evening services, the pupils shall accompany the Principal. The Presbyterian, Baptist and Lutheran Churches, are not more than a square from the seminary grounds, and the Methodist Episcopal Church but little further distant. A prayer-meeting is kept up by the pupils in the seminary.

General Remarks.

When a large number of persons are assembled under the same roof a Christian spirit and principle require each one to yield somewhat, and consent to some restraint for the convenience and comfort of all; and, while we impose no regulation that experience does not show to be necessary, it is submitted that no one who cannot make up her mind to be restrained, should enter a seminary; nor should any one, who, after experience, cannot render a prompt and cheerful obedience to the rules, remain, but quietly and at once withdraw.

Parents should so prepare their daughters' wardrobes as to leave them little occasion for shopping.

As a matter of economy, each pupil should be furnished with a gymnastic suit.

The supply of more money than what is absolutely necessary, is worse than useless.

Absence, even for a few days, during term time, has such an evil influence on the progress of a student, so distracts the minds of others, and so deranges the classes, that parents are earnestly requested not to allow it.

Students should be present on the first day of each term. Tardy entrances keep back prompt students, increase the teachers' labors, frequently prevent the pupil from acquiring, thoroughly, the first elements of a science, and inculcate a bad habit of impunctuality.

Pupils from a distance must board in the seminary

Parents are requested to make as few solicitations as possible for exceptions to the Rules. Such solicitations greatly increase the difficulty in the regulation and controlling of a seminary, which are understood only by those who have had experience in the work.
